

Pródromos-Ioánnis Prodromídís

Received a B.A. from the Athens University of Economics and Business (AUEB) in 1990, two M.A. degrees in Economics and History from Pennsylvania State University in 1993 and 1996, respectively, a fellowship from the A. Onassis Foundation (1994–97), and a Ph.D. in Economics from the University of Essex in 2001.

Lectured at the National University of Ireland–University College Cork (academic years 1999–2003), joined the research staff of Greece’s Centre for Planning and Economic Research (KEPE) in 2004, and held visiting Assistant Professorships at AUEB (2003–04) and the University of Cyprus (2008–09), a Visiting Associate Professorship at AUEB (2010–13), and Adjunct Faculty positions at AUEB (2013–19), the Open University of Cyprus (2017–19, 2023–present), and the Hellenic Open University (2017–18, 2019–present).

Represented Greece at the OECD’s Territorial Development Policy Committee, serving as Vice-Chair during 2006–08. Awarded first prize by the Academy of Athens for a monograph on micro-regional economics, recognized as the best scientific study in economics published in Greece during 2005–07. Coordinated the research unit established at Greece’s Ministry for Development and Competitiveness while on secondment (2012–13), and contributed to several KEPE projects, including analyses and policy proposals supporting Western Greece’s regional development plan (2015–17), among them the initiative that earned the region the EU-award of European Entrepreneurial Region 2017. Served as Secretary General of Greece’s national statistical society, the Greek Statistical Institute, in 2018 and 2019.

Research articles have been published in Agricultural Economics Review, Applied Economics, Cyprus Economic Policy Review, Economic Modelling, Empirical Economics Letters, Empirical Economics, European Planning Studies, European Spatial Research and Policy, Journal of Economic Asymmetries, International Journal of Manpower, Journal of European Economic History, Review of Urban & Regional Development Studies, Scottish Journal of Political Economy, and other peer-reviewed journals.

<https://www.kepe.gr/en/user/pjprod>